Volunteers don't get paid, not because they're worthless,
but because they're priceless.

Sherry Anderson

“Life’s most persistent and urgent question is,
What are you doing for others?”

— Martin Luther King, Jr.

A photograph of a misty forest path. Sunlight filters through the trees, creating a soft, ethereal atmosphere. The path is narrow and appears to be made of dirt or gravel. The trees are tall and thin, with some green leaves visible. The overall mood is peaceful and contemplative.

VOLUNTEERS
DO NOT NECESSARILY HAVE THE TIME; THEY HAVE THE HEART

ELIZABETH ANDREW

A stone Buddha statue in a meditative pose sits on a ledge overlooking a river. The statue is weathered and has a greenish patina. The river is in the background, with a stone path leading into the water. The text is overlaid on the right side of the image.

Winston Churchill

Time is not measured by the years that we live. But by the deeds that we do and the joys that we give.

A scenic view of a mountain valley, likely Yosemite National Park, featuring a prominent granite cliff on the left and a valley floor with a river and distant mountains. The sky is a soft, hazy orange, suggesting dawn or dusk. A large, dark, semi-transparent rectangular box is overlaid across the center of the image, containing white text. Below the main text box, there is a smaller, red rectangular box containing the name 'Rosalynn Carter' in white text.

Without volunteers, we'd be a nation without a soul.

Rosalynn Carter

Volunteering is at the very core of being a human. No one has made it through life without someone else's help.
